Titans Coach Jeff Fisher Helps Tennessee's Unemployed

NASHVILLE-Tennessee Department of Labor & Workforce Development
Commissioner Mark Reineke announces National Football League, Titans Coach Jeff Fisher will do a Public Service Announcement for Tennessee Career Centers.

Jeff Fisher will appear in a PSA urging employers to utilize the free services of the Tennessee Career Centers. Fisher rarely has time to volunteer during the football season but said, "I feel this is important to help Tennessee's unemployed get back on their feet."

The Tennessee Career Centers are a one-stop operation featuring free services for employers and workers. Some of the services offered are résumé and interviewing workshops and free use of computers, fax and copy machines. For employers, the Career Centers offer pre-screening, pre-testing and free training for employees. There are 111 Tennessee Career Centers across the state.

Commissioner Mark Reineke said, "This is a great opportunity to get our message about the Career Centers to a wider audience. Jeff Fisher and the Tennessee Titans have many fans in this state, and with Coach Fisher's help we hope they learn more about what our Tennessee Career Centers have to offer."

The spot was videotaped at the Middle Tennessee Career Center on Metro Center Drive, just a few minutes away from the Titans training facility. The PSA will air on television and radio stations across Tennessee and will be released in early December.
